

Mr. Ankur Rajvanshi

Assistant Professor

Ankur Rajvanshi is Assistant Professor in Department of Mechanical Engineering. He is associated with B.I.T group since 2008 and having more than 10 years teaching and Industrial experience, He is B.Tech (Mechanical Engineering) and M.Tech (Production Engineering).

He is having rich experience of teaching wide variety of subjects such as Elements of Mechanical Engineering, Manufacturing Processes, Measurement and Metrology with special interest in teaching internal combustion engines and automobile engineering. He believes in project based teaching learning & mentored several projects related to I.C engines and automobiles. Many of his students, under his guidance participated in go- kart fabrication and racing competitions and won several prizes at national level. He has also published a paper on "production of bio diesel from acid oil" in international journal of application of science and technology. Currently he is writing a book on advancements of internal combustion engines and fuel technology.

He administrated several responsibilities at college and university level such as sports in charge, squad leader anti ragging committee, member of flying squad in university examination etc. He is associated with several NGO's for teaching under privileged children's.

He is also having Wipro mission 10 x certification and life time membership of ISTE.